Imagine yourself watching live theatre while enjoying Italian cuisine and homemade dessert. This opportunity can be yours in the Hugo High School cafeteria on Feb. 23.
The 2009-2010 drama class of Hugo High School is “on a roll” and we are excited about the upcoming event, “A night of monologues and scenes.”
Our monologues and scenes will be taken from various classic plays written by many great playwrights, such as Tennessee Williams and William Shakespeare. We will start dinner at 6:30 p.m. and begin our production at 7:30 p.m. This will be an evening of intimate dinner theatre. Tickets may be purchased in advance from Hugo High School drama students.
The production is being directed by Cara Dominick. Dominick is in her ninth year of teaching English and her third year of teaching drama. This is also Dominick’s first year to teach at Hugo. She has a strong love of theatre and is excited at the opportunity to showcase the talents of her students.
“I am very proud of my drama students. They have worked very hard this year to explore their own creative talents and each is in the process of learning how to express those talents,” Dominick said.
Adult tickets will be $8 and children under the age of 12 will be $5. If you are in need of tickets you may call: 580.513.1113 and leave a message, or e-mail cdominick@hugoschools.com and you will definitely receive your tickets.
