“Oh what a night, late December back in ‘63. What a very special time for me, as I remember, what a night!” Does that sound like a song you know? That is December 1963 (Oh, What a night) by Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons. If you liked that song, then you must like other songs by them like, “Working My Way Back to You,” “Sherry Baby” and much more. Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons’ music has become very popular this year. It is popping up more and more and is actually appearing on Broadway. Can’t make it to Broadway? You can hear all these songs matched with great choreography right here, in little old Hugo during the spring show choir concert.

Carla Rabon’s class is preparing to put on their show, entitled “Oh What a Night.” They have been working on this show since spring break ended and are extremely excited to perform for everyone.

The boys in the class had to break out of their comfort zone and sing in ways they haven’t ever before. A lot of the songs require the boys to sing in high falsetto notes. So, that is a challenge all in its own.

The choreography is a whole other story. The show choir class has been watching the choreography from the show Glee. They have incorporated a lot of the dance steps from the show into their own performance. Some of the soloists are Kristie Lopez, Paul Wilson and Justin Davis.

Show choir is getting help from the art class lead by Kelsi Kiper, Hugo High art teacher. The class is helping build the set. They are making a unique curtain out of old ‘45 records purchased from Willie Carrey, school janitor.

This will be show choir’s final show of the year, please come out and support them. The performance will be 7 p.m. April 19 at the Hugo High School gym. Tickets will be on sale at the door, adults are $4 and students are $2.
